

Tips to Get Noticed

(Increase chances of getting internships)

Being a part of an institution surrounded by similarly high-achieving and goal-oriented peers, you are in a position to develop attributes to stand out amongst everyone else. If you want people to notice your talents, work on developing and promoting specific skills, and always strive to exceed expectations.

Confidence leaves a lasting impression, so work on building your self-esteem and becoming comfortable in your skin.

- Focus on specific talents and interests.

Pursue and promote particular interests. Decide what you're good at, figure out concrete ways to apply your talents, and communicate your skills to others.

- Do more than the bare minimum.

Always try to exceed expectations, people will notice when you go above and beyond at a given task.

- Personality and Professional Etiquette

The way you carry yourself speaks a lot. Maintaining proper etiquette and using flattery with moderation can leave a significant impression.

- Follow up after the interview

Failing to follow up is a sure way to fly under the radar, sending a polite email(within due limits) reminding them of the interaction would be a great way to get a callback.

- Embrace constructive criticism

To identify areas for improvement, you'll need to listen and take up constructive criticism without getting defensive. Ask for your mentor's advice, the eagerness to learn gives a good outlook.
